REGINALD H. BONNELL
The Development Of A Directory of Instructional Materials To Supplement The History Curriculum At The Senior High Level In Newfoundland Schools

by

Reginald H. Bonnell, B.A., B.Ed.

A Report submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Master of Education

Department of Curriculum and Instruction Memorial University of Newfoundland

March, 1977

St. John's
Newfoundland
Abstract

This report includes both a directory of instructional materials to support the senior high school history program and a section discussing how the guide was constructed. Included in this latter section are references to relative literature, discussion of need for the directory, scope of the directory and procedures followed in its construction.

The directory itself is presented in an appendix. The first section is a general introduction to the directory explaining general limitations and applications and giving general recommendations as to locale for the included materials. The purpose of the directory is to enable educators in Newfoundland at the senior high level to choose instructional materials which will support the history curriculum. All materials included in the directory have been recommended by reviews, selection aids, or teachers.

The directory is intended solely as a guide to instructional materials which can support the teaching of the senior high history program.

It will be necessary to update the directory annually to ensure maximum effectiveness. A revision which would include materials presently excluded would increase the utility of the list. A directory of historical fiction to supplement senior high history would also serve a useful function in the history curriculum.

INTRODUCTION

The development of Instructional Materials Centres in schools has brought increased demands from both teachers and students for materials to suit their particular needs. This development has led to new extensions of learning, moving the student outside of the classroom and allowing the pursuit of independent study. As Miller (1976) stated:

"Today the IMC holds out a promise to education, that of building a learning environment where a student can function successfully and learn independently. In such an environment the student would not be taught something he already knew, but would learn how to learn, a skill that would continue long after graduation." (p. 227)

The increasing use of instructional materials, in addition to the prescribed textbook, has confronted classroom teachers with a new set of problems. In addition to preparing lesson plans, grading students' work and participating in supervisory chores, a classroom teacher is expected to use and evaluate the effectiveness of many forms of instructional materials. The quantity of material is immense and the teacher's task monumental. Wood (1975) has reported:

"With the great masses of non-print media descending upon us, engulfing us daily with glossy brochures, eye-catching promotional gimmicks...we who use the films, slides, filmstrips, games and multi-media kits and numerous other species of non-print media need help in just wading through the overwhelming amount of material, not to speak of selecting, previewing, buying and using the materials judiciously and effectively in the classroom, library discussion group, instructional materials center and community organization." (p. 6)
Although Wood was talking specifically about non-print materials, the same problems confront the teacher when it comes to selecting print materials. Despite the fact that modern technology has accelerated the growth and development of different forms of informational materials, the printed word is, and will probably continue to be, one of the major methods for communicating information in our schools. Daniel (1970) agrees:

In a knowledge society, education and books clearly play a central role. Over the next thirty years the communication industry, and along with it book publishing, obviously will be expanding. (p. 7)

The purpose of this project is to construct a selection aid to assist educators in the purchase of various forms of instructional materials which support the current senior high school history curriculum in Newfoundland.

To be useful, such a selection aid must reflect the needs of the user and take into consideration specific curricular concerns. A selection aid must also be current to be of any value and should include both print and non-print materials. All materials included must be currently available, and up-to-date in content. Every effort has been made to ascertain that all materials in this directory meet these criteria. The discontinuance of certain materials, without prior warning, as well as the fluid state of world affairs, will restrict the utility of the directory of materials.
Excessively expensive instructional materials or materials that require expensive equipment for their operation have been excluded from this report. Due to the limited purchasing power of the majority of schools and school boards, certain materials are excluded by necessity.

This selection aid has been designed to assist educators responsible for the purchase of instructional materials for their school or school board, and teachers of history at the senior high level. Materials included have been selected on the basis of cost and quality in both presentation and content for educational purposes.
II

NEED FOR STUDY

The rapid increase in the number of instructional materials available to educators has caused increased concerns about quality, effectiveness and duplicity. This concern has been reflected in the growth of selection aids, in various formats, which are designed to assist the classroom teacher in the selection process. The New York State Division of Educational Communications (1969) has reported:

In the face of the flood of materials, and of newly available funds to purchase them, educational decision makers have begun to develop techniques which will permit competent and satisfactory selections while avoiding waste and duplication of effort in the selection process. (p. 1)

The personal reactions of teachers and instructional materials specialists have been and will probably continue to be, the major method of evaluating materials for teacher and student use. An individual evaluation of the material will be greatly supported or reinforced if it is paired with another separate evaluation. Wofford (1959) agrees:

No one person alone is equal to the task of choosing materials for all levels of reading ability, maturity and interests... The librarian knows, or should know a great deal about library materials, but it is the teacher who knows, or should know, what materials will be most useful in the classroom. The two working together will assure a more adequate, workable collection of books and other materials. (p. 19)
Individual evaluation of materials is greatly influenced by the qualifications of the person or persons performing the evaluation. Based on the above observations, it is obvious that recommendations from several qualified people, should be obtained wherever possible.

It is extremely difficult for any teacher or instructional materials specialist to preview the many varied products available for educational use. This task can be greatly facilitated by reviews of material in the initial selection process. These reviews can be used to establish a base from which to compile a list of recommended materials. These compilations can become an invaluable evaluative source, providing critical comments that teachers can use to assist them in their selection of materials. This information is specifically useful when it is confined to one specific subject area, especially to teachers who teach only one or two subject areas at the senior high level of instruction.

By reading the critical comments of others, teachers are able to make a more informed decision as to whether specific pieces of material meet their particular educational needs. Access to the preponderance of reviews of historical material can be greatly facilitated by the development of recommended lists of materials which collate reviews from educational selection aids and journals. Under the present financial constraints it is imperative that every effort be made to ensure that maximum returns be obtained from the expenditures made. The development of such a list would assist teachers in judiciously selecting material which would meet the needs of the curriculum and of the students.

The development of selection aids in various formats (see Chapter V) is one technique designed to assist teachers in making informed decisions rather than speculative choices. Broadus (1973) stated that "the lists will at least provide a minimum collection of reasonable quality" (p. 62).

The problem in selecting appropriate instructional materials in Newfoundland is complicated by several regional considerations. Despite the number of aids to selection available, the problem has been in relating these lists to any given subject area for any one specific curriculum. Many of the lists which have been developed are produced with American or other Canadian curricula in mind. Since these two geographic areas continue their high school programs into a twelfth, or even thirteenth year, any list designed with either of these two in mind could present problems if adopted without due consideration being given to the local educational needs.

The artificial division between print and non-print materials has increased the difficulty of locating suitable instructional materials. Lists of recommended print materials are available; lists of recommended non-print materials are available; but only a few lists exist which include both print and non-print materials. As Wood (1975) has stated:
If there is to be any help for educators who must select materials for their classes it will be in the development of more and varied evaluative and critical reviews of media in a growing market. (p. 8)
III

SELECTION

The need for selection:

In order for an instructional materials centre to function properly, it must be stocked with materials of high quality which reflect educational concerns. According to Davis (1974):

The function of the library media program is to support, to implement, to enrich, to vitalize, and to humanize the educational program as it strives to attain excellence in content, process, and product. (p. 21)

A deliberate and purposeful plan for the addition of materials must be developed to ensure the quality of instructional materials which are to be purchased. This plan should be developed in accordance with the needs of the curriculum, the students and the teachers of the individual schools or district centres. Woolis (1972) agrees:

Careful selection will be the outcome of a sound selection policy. Such procedures and policies will lessen the potential of censorship from individuals or groups within the community. A policy will shape a direction and suggest a procedure to follow in case of complaint, and the points considered while previewing will be the basis of retaining the material. (p. 4)

The impact that instructional materials have in today's educational institutions cannot be too heavily underscored. As the National Education Association (1972) has reported:

The kinds of instructional materials selected by schools greatly affect curricula, ways of teaching and student motivation and achievement. (p. 10)
Davis (1974) concurs:

The use of source materials offers an exciting challenge to the student for it enables him to participate actively in interpreting and reconstructing history from the records of the past. (p. 187)

Since these materials have such an impact on the quality of education, their selection must involve decisions which cannot be made lightly. One of the major concerns of educators must be the judicious selection of materials which will be used by and with students.

Judicious selection of materials, essentially, is an effort to supply to both students and teachers, the best educational ideas, innovations and resources available. Brett (1976) states that:

The importance of careful selection cannot be over-emphasized. Not to select is to ignore needs; not to select is to misuse limited resources; not to select is to fail children and young people who have the right to look to us for guidance; not to select is to be professionally irresponsible. (p. 5)

This selection must be concerned with providing materials which reflect the interests of the age groups involved, the reading and/or audiovisual sophistication of the users and the instructional goals of the institution they serve. The process of selection is a long one which includes the evaluation of many various criteria. The National Education Association (1972) outlined some of the criteria to be considered.

Each topic appears in expanded form so that the factors involved in each criteria can be clarified:

The above listed criteria show some of the major considerations to be considered in the evaluation of material for educational use.

Selection Policy

The selection policy developed for this study was devised to act as a general guide to explain the dimensions and limits of the collection being developed. It reflects a solid educational basis for the selection of all material. It is general in tone so as not to be too restrictive in its terminology or application. The writer through necessity restricted this policy to materials dealing with history at the grades 9, 10, and 11 levels in Newfoundland schools.
1. The main purpose of instructional materials is to support the curriculum and materials should be chosen with that in mind.

2. All material must reflect the needs and interests of high school students.

3. Because of the varied levels of ability and sophistication of the age group, materials should range from the semi-scholarly adult materials to juvenile materials.

4. Materials should be included which may be of general interest or as curriculum related reference.

5. Materials encompassing the above considerations should then be evaluated for acceptable literary and/or technical quality and integrity of treatment according to the criteria outlined previously in this chapter. (see Selection Considerations)

6. All materials listed should be recommended for purchase.

7. Materials included in the directory will be:

Books Filmstrips Records
Jackdaws Audiotapes Games
Slides Multi-media kits

8. All materials included on the final evaluation list will be recommended by one or more of the following:

Standard Lists
Classroom teachers
Instructional Materials specialists
Reviews in Professional Periodicals
9. All material is restricted to the "traditional" definition of the word "History", that is, the study of man's past. Only cursory attention will be paid to "Social Studies".
IV

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS

A major factor to be considered in the evaluation of instructional materials is cost. According to a report by the National Education Association (1972):

'How much will it cost? ' Can we afford it?' 'Will it be worth it?' Questions of cost come up throughout the selection process. Economic and financial considerations often act as constraints upon selection. Rightly or not, the persons involved in selection may reject or limit the purchase of certain materials because 'we can't get that kind of money from the front office'. (p. 51)

The selection of any material for purchase must always be made with the belief that the best value is being obtained for the money spent.

With the proliferation of materials available, the task of ensuring the best value becomes more difficult, especially when these materials are on the same topic. All too often schools act in isolation, rather than sharing information about good and poor instructional materials. This leads to unnecessary duplication and improvident use of funds. A school that has evaluated a given piece of material does not pass its judgment on to the other schools throughout the district. Other schools may either overlook the material or order it for themselves and find it to be of limited or not use.
A selection aid, composed of instructional materials which have proven themselves useful can, therefore, help to eliminate wasteful expenditure in the area of instructional materials. Such a selection aid would be of great value to educators because it would list materials that had actually been tried in schools and found to be valuable both educationally and technically. Ideally, teachers and students should have all of the "quality" instructional aids produced available to them. The reality of the situation, however, makes it absolutely essential that only the best materials be purchased with the limited financial resources available.

Limited funding has led directly to the development of district centres which can purchase materials that individual schools cannot afford—materials that would be of interest to a number of schools but would be too expensive for an individual school's budget. Channeling some of the instructional materials budget into a district collection can help to avoid unnecessary duplication of materials and free funds to provide a much greater variety of materials than individual schools could purchase for themselves. A central collection of this nature can make possible the increased utilization of the materials purchased, thereby providing better value for the money spent.
SELECTION AIDS AVAILABLE

Introduction:

Numerous aids are available to assist the classroom teacher in the selection of instructional materials. These aids are produced to increase teacher awareness of materials in a subject area or specific topic. Certain types of selection aids are more valuable than others and it becomes the responsibility of the teacher to select only those which have a sound educational basis for their development.

Standard Lists:

One technique to assist teachers in the selection of materials is the preparation of standard lists. These lists are simply a listing of materials in various subject areas that are recommended for use in schools. These lists provide a minimum collection of materials of reasonable quality in a given subject area. Some standard lists are merely a listing of recommended materials; some are annotated lists and some are produced by incorporating reviews from current reviewing periodicals and/or judgments from both teachers and subject area specialists.

Whatever their design, these lists enable the user to make an informed decision as to the suitability of the material to their particular situation. At best a standard list of materials is only a guide to materials in any given subject area, and is not meant to be anything more. Probably the most useful of selection aids, standard lists do, however, have problems involved with their use. Much of the material is rapidly dated or of current interest only. As Broadus (1973) has pointed out:
They [standard lists] quickly go out of date. New and significant books constantly are being published, and there is the possibility that any book [or non-print item] on the recommended list has been, or soon will be, supplanted by a better. (p. 61 - 62)

In order to combat this problem many of the standard lists currently available to teachers are frequently updated by periodic supplements to the basic lists or undergo regular revisions.

Standard lists often fail to incorporate regional needs, particular curriculum requirements and cultural discrepancies. Since these three considerations are not incorporated into standard lists designed for mass circulation, teachers are forced to look elsewhere for this type of material.

Reviews:

As well as standard lists, reviews of materials are often an invaluable aid to selection. These reviews can be found in just about any newspaper or periodical published. Generally, the most useful information to teachers is found in periodicals designed for educators, since the materials reviewed are evaluated with an eye to classroom application. Reviews in periodicals are subject to personal bias on the part of the reviewers. Hastiness in reviewing due to time deadlines and broad generalizations as to the usefulness of the materials are further limitations associated with reviews. Reviews which are signed by the reviewer are much more valuable than unsigned ones since the reader can then determine the credentials and reliability of the reviewer. The major advantages of Reviews are their ability to bring current materials to the reader's attention and the provision of evaluative judgments on the material."

Bibliographies:

Bibliographies in textbooks and guide books can also be a source of information for teachers. Often, however, these bibliographies are included with no consideration given to quality, suitability level or ease of use. Frequently these lists reflect additional source material on the same subject that has incidentally come to the attention of the author/producer. There are, however, some excellent bibliographies included with some instructional materials which reflect concerns for educationally sound material. A selective bibliography can be extremely useful to the teacher but familiarity with materials is a pre-requisite for distinguishing between the two types of bibliographies available. Caution is, therefore, recommended when using bibliographies as a source for selection.

Awareness Lists:

Another valuable aid available to teachers is awareness lists. These are lists of materials, on a given subject, that are available commercially. These lists are usually produced by individuals or agencies to make the user aware of the depth or type of material available on that subject. With this type of aid the user has to become cognizant of who has produced the list and for what purpose. Has this information been produced for educational or commercial reasons? If for the former, the lists are quite helpful; if for the latter the motive must be suspect. Awareness lists make no attempt to evaluate the materials included. They are useful for someone looking for sources of certain types of materials but the inclusion of items on the list cannot be taken as a recommendation.

Standard lists, reviews, bibliographies and awareness lists are the main types of selection aids available to teachers. They represent resource information most commonly available to teachers. Standard lists and reviewing media are probably the most useful references for teachers because of the critical educational comments they provide. Others are useful to varying degrees depending upon the coverage of the particular aid utilized. In summary, the value of each source of information is dependent on the needs of the individual seeking effective instructional materials. The critical comments and/or descriptions found in standard lists and reviews provide more information on the material and thereby allow a more knowledgeable decision to be made regarding the usefulness of the material.
VI
PLAN

The development of a selection aid which correlates to the needs of the Newfoundland curriculum and includes both print and non-print material has long been overdue. At various times in the history of education in this province various groups and/or individuals have produced lists of recommended materials but, for the most part, these have been of a general nature. The titles provided a very scanty coverage of all subject areas, which was of limited use in the selection of specific teaching materials.

These lists were usually produced in an effort to provide a basic minimum collection for school libraries. The majority of the lists compiled have confined themselves to print materials, especially books. With the growing demands from schools and the curriculum for all types of resource material, a list which combines both print and non-print material is viewed as a valuable asset to the classroom teacher.

The nature of the courses of instruction authorized by the provincial Department of Education has led to increased demands for support materials. Many of the newer courses are attempting to wean both teachers and students away from dependancy upon one textbook. This is especially true in the fields of Language Arts and Social Studies. A need has thus been created for information which adds to textbook coverage. In addition, the introduction of shared evaluation at the grade 11 level has placed great emphasis on the evaluation of students' performance by means other than formal paper and pen examinations. This has resulted in more independent study and project work which again has created demands for educational materials to supplement the curriculum. To try and fill this demand for materials teachers are now becoming more involved with the task of selection. Recommended lists of materials are now, more than ever, in great demand.

The development of a comprehensive selection aid for all grade levels and all subject areas would be a mammoth undertaking and is beyond the scope of this project. While the author of this paper has attempted to produce a selection aid for grades 9, 10 and 11 History teachers in this province, other subject areas have been excluded.

Ideally, similar lists would be compiled to encompass the rest of the high school curriculum. The directory developed by the author includes print and non-print materials for the teaching of the History program presently being taught in Newfoundland schools. The list is confined to materials suitable for senior high students. In addition, recommendations as to whether these materials would be more suitably stored at the school or district level are included. The two major factors in determining the site for the material are the cost of the material and the amount of use the material is expected to receive. The more expensive items and items which would be used once in an academic year and for a very brief period of time are recommended for the district collection. Items which are moderate in price and would normally be in great demand for project work and assignments are recommended for the school collection.

The development of a listing of recommended instructional materials for the senior high history curriculum was complicated by the fact that the history curriculum is presently in a period of transition. To further complicate the selection process, two official courses exist for both grades X and XI; consequently, the courses being taught vary from school to school.

Despite the fact that unforeseen changes may occur in the history program at the senior high level, this project has been confined to the history courses presently taught in Newfoundland schools. The materials which have been included in this list are those which supplement the topics covered by the history curriculum.

The "Program of Studies 1975-76" released by the Department of Education of the province of Newfoundland reflects topics covered in all of these courses at the senior high level.

Once the topics were outlined, decisions had to be made regarding the inclusion of materials. The initial step of adding materials to the directory was to search the selection aids (see Appendix B) for recommended material on the topics covered in the history courses. If the material was pertinent to the topics being taught and if it was recommended by a reputable reviewing source, preferably more than one, it was included. In such cases comments from the source have been supplied. Each comment contains a summation of the material's contents as well as an evaluative comment on the material itself. Following the comment the title of the source from which the comment is taken has been given.

Materials not reviewed in standard selection aids but which were available commercially were also evaluated. This was done by obtaining material from producers' catalogues on a preview basis, the material was then evaluated by either the author, teachers with the Avalon North Integrated School Board or both. In such cases, the name of the reviewer follows the comment.

Finally a wealth of material was examined which was available either at schools throughout the school district or at the District Resource Centre. Schools throughout the district proved to be invaluable in supplying print materials for personal examination and the District Resource Centre proved to be highly beneficial in allowing the author to examine non-print materials.

The above steps were followed as a general procedural outline. Involved in each of these steps were a number of vital considerations. A prime consideration in the evaluation of materials is the degree to which they fill local needs. The classroom teacher is the person most aware of the sophistication level of the students and is in the best position for evaluating the success or failure of materials with his/her class. According to Woolls (1972):

Teachers are essential members of any selection group or team. They are the most cognizant of the curriculum guide, their lesson plans, and the difficult areas to cover. Teachers have defined teaching and learning purposes. These purposes will serve them in selecting materials. (p. 4)

For this reason local demands have to play a large part in the selection of any instructional materials. Any materials found to be of high quality by either local teachers or by the writer himself, or both, have been included in the list. In these instances the name of the reviewer follows the evaluative comment. An attempt was made to include actual teachers' comments on the evaluated materials. In the majority of cases this was not possible, since teacher comments were non-specific.

In an effort to introduce a standard for the evaluation of materials, a list of items to be considered and a selection policy were developed (see Chapter III). An evaluation form (see Appendix C) was then developed for teacher use. The evaluation form was designed with a number of considerations in mind. It was deliberately brief and non-technical so that a classroom teacher would not feel inhibited by its size or complexity. A space was provided so that teachers could supply their personal reactions to the material. Using this evaluation form, teachers' comments on materials were then recorded and provided feedback as to the suitability of the material. Ideally, this should have provided a large number of practical, classroom tried comments on the usefulness of the material. Unfortunately, teachers' comments were normally limited to one or two word superlatives.
The materials selected for this list, and, therefore recommended, are useful at either the school level or the central district collection, or both. Some materials will be more effectively used in the school if they are permanently housed there, while other materials will be more effectively used if they are permanently housed in a collection which is central to the whole school district and loaned to schools upon request. The consideration of location for the material is critical in the case of the more expensive non-print media. Another major factor in determining the location of material is 'How much will the item be used?' The size of the schools, the number of classes using the material and the size of the budget will also be determining factors. Anticipation of these factors will determine for which collection it is purchased. Some materials will fit into both categories and may be housed in either or both areas depending upon the local needs and economic situation.

For this list a large amount of material was both examined or encountered in reviews. The author personally spent over 250 hours examining materials or reading reviews. Much of the material examined was rejected. Usually rejection occurred because of deficiencies in either content or technical quality or both (based on Selection Considerations outlined in Chapter III.) Although no accurate record of this material was kept it would be conservatively estimated to surpass one thousand items. A serious attempt was made to include only material on all major areas covered in local history courses and to include only material of high quality. Despite this consideration some areas have not been included because of a general paucity of material on that subject or a lack of material of sufficient quality to merit inclusion. Recency of material was also an important consideration for the list. The choice of material reviewed was generally limited to that produced within the last five years. Occasionally materials that were continually recommended in a number of sources were included regardless of production date.

From time to time special problems particular to this province appeared. The majority of selection aids had to be adapted to younger senior high school students in Newfoundland schools. In many cases material recommended for use at the senior high level would in reality be more suitable for grades XII or XIII, which do not exist in this province.

High school librarians in the Avalon North Integrated School Board who, after ordering materials from recommended lists for senior high students, often found the materials too difficult for learner comprehension. Conversely when material was ordered from recommended lists for junior high, it was well received by both teachers and students at the senior high level. For this reason recommended lists for junior high schools also appear in the list of selection aids used (see Appendix B).

Virtually all school libraries with an organized cataloguing system, all public libraries operating the this province and the Department of Education Film Library have their materials arranged according to the Dewey Decimal System. Since this is the case and for purposes of systemized location of material, all materials listed in the report (see Appendix D) are done in accordance with the Dewey Decimal System.
An effort was made to include prices with all of the materials listed. With the present economic situation, however, these prices may fluctuate without warning, but were included as a general guide to the cost of specific materials. These prices may also be helpful for comparative purposes.

The majority of materials listed were selected because of their "historical" approach. This has meant that a great deal of material which would more correctly be labelled "Social Studies" has been eliminated. This has been done to ensure a more manageable unit. The Social Studies approach would have meant inclusion of materials which are concerned with economics, political science, geography, philosophy, sociology and anthropology. Many of these areas are encountered in a "historical" treatment but they do not provide the major theme in the treatment of the material.

The completed listing of recommended materials is by no means exhaustive. The resultant directory is a guide to the user but is not intended to be the sole authority on the subject. This directory does provide a good basic collection to cover the history courses of senior high schools. The directory of recommended materials should prove useful when teachers begin ordering new materials to support their teaching.

The response from teachers throughout the district while extremely helpful in recommending or rejecting materials was limited in the usefulness of its commentary. In most cases, comments were limited to one or two word superlatives. Teachers were quite emphatic and verbose in their acceptance or rejection of material but unusually terse when requested to put their comments on paper. In the future methods or approaches may be found to overcome this tendency. For purposes of this study teacher reactions were utilized but specific written comments were obtained from other sources.
VIII

LIMITATIONS

The inclusion and exclusion of media in this directory involved a degree of subjectivity on the part of the author. The primary criteria used in the selection of materials in the directory are listed below.

Cost:
The cost of certain media was considered to be beyond the means of most schools and/or school boards in the province. The cost of support material for the utilization of some resources was a major consideration in the types of resources included.

Availability:
The availability of some materials was a consideration which kept materials off the list. An attempt was made to limit the list of materials to those readily available and within the budgetary limitations of most schools/school boards with a minimum of expensive equipment for operation.

Technical Skills:
A minimum of technical skills for the utilization of the material was also considered as one of the criteria for selection.

An effort was made to include prices with all of the materials listed. With the present economic situation, however, these prices may fluctuate without warning, but were included as a general guide to the cost of specific materials. These prices may also be helpful for comparative purposes.

The majority of materials listed were selected because of their "historical" approach. This has meant that a great deal of material which would more correctly be labelled "Social Studies" has been eliminated. This has been done to ensure a more manageable unit. The Social Studies approach would have meant inclusion of materials which are concerned with economics, political science, geography, philosophy, sociology and anthropology. Many of these areas are encountered in a "historical" treatment but they do not provide the major theme in the treatment of the material.

The completed listing of recommended materials is by no means exhaustive. The resultant directory is a guide to the user, but is not intended to be the sole authority on the subject. This directory does provide a good basic collection to cover the history courses of senior high schools. The directory of recommended materials should prove useful when teachers begin ordering new materials to support their teaching.
IX
CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

A definite need exists for the development of selection aids to correlate with the Newfoundland curriculum. Educators have voiced this concern for a number of years, but little has been done to alleviate the situation. This listing is a start. The development of additional lists will not only assist educators in their selection of material, but will hopefully improve the quality of material that is available to teachers and students alike.

A selection aid has to be current to be of any value and a guide such as this should be revised annually. Such a guide should aid all history teachers and librarians at the high school level in Newfoundland. Therefore, instead of individuals and/or individual school boards each compiling their own aids, it is recommended that one co-ordinating body undertake this task. This could be undertaken by the Social Studies Committee of the Department of Education or the provincial Educational Media Council.

The continuation of this type of selection aid in other specific subject areas should be encouraged. The ideal would be to develop one comprehensive aid which correlates with the Newfoundland curriculum in all subject areas. Efforts are presently being made in this direction, by Special Interest Councils of the Newfoundland Teacher's Association and the Newfoundland Department of Education.
Similar lists or revisions to this directory should incorporate the specific formats which have been excluded. The addition of these formats would provide a more comprehensive guide to instructional materials.

The development of a list of recommended historical fiction to supplement the high school history curriculum would also be a valuable aid. Since the prime prerequisite of good historical fiction is accuracy in detail and chronology, students could be introduced to various historical periods through this avenue. Not only does historical fiction develop a feeling for historical periods and personalities, it also can provide motivation for more in-depth study of the people and times under consideration. This is an excellent method to introduce history to students and a listing of recommended historical fiction would highlight a much neglected area.

APPENDIX A

A Directory of Instructional Materials to Support the History Curriculum

at the Senior High Level
INTRODUCTION

This listing of instructional materials was developed to supplement the Newfoundland history curriculum at the senior high level. It is specifically designed to provide librarians, instructional materials specialists and teachers with a selective guide to instructional materials.

Although it can be considered a basic collection, most schools and/or school boards will naturally want to supplement the list. It was impossible for the writer to examine all instructional materials dealing with history, just as it was also impossible to keep up with the constant barrage of new materials entering the market every month. It is recommended, therefore, that if the user knows of any material that may be useful, this material should be added to the list. The list consists primarily of "history" materials. An added section lists some "social studies" materials which straddle the thin line separating "social studies" and "history". Since social studies was not the main concern in developing this list, only peripheral attention is paid to that aspect.

Organization

This list of materials is arranged according to the Abridged Dewey Decimal Classification, which is commonly utilized in school libraries. Prices for all materials are as up-to-date as possible. They are subject to change, however, and should be checked with supplier's and/or jobbers.
before ordering. Bibliographic information is given for each title, followed by an annotation, which frequently includes an evaluation from a quoted source.

Ordering Practices

It is recommended that print materials be ordered from a jobber or wholesaler rather than directly from the publisher. A jobber will usually supply books fully processed and catalogued and at a trade discount. Often publishers will not be able to offer these same features. Jobbers also have the advantage of sending all your orders to one company rather than to innumerable publishers. In the case of non-print materials, there is usually little choice. Producers of non-print media usually sell their own products or have one agency handle the marketing aspect.

Anyone wanting to purchase a particular piece of material will have to order directly from that agency. Any material listed will have the name of either the publisher or producer's name following the title. Most of the producers of the non-print are commonly known through the catalogues which they continually send to senior high schools. A list of publishers/producers can be found in Canadian Publishers Directory published twice a year as a supplement to Quill and Quire, 59 Front St. E. Toronto.

Additional copies of the Directory are available to subscribers for $6.00 each.
Recommendations

Beside the annotation for each piece of material appears either the abbreviation S.C. or D.C., or both. These indicate the recommended location for that piece of material — S.C. meaning School Collection; D.C. meaning District Collection. These are by no means mandatory assignments. Some schools with large budgets may well purchase things recommended for the District Collection. These decisions have been based on an average size high school and an average or below average budget. Many of the items recommended for the District Collection would be very useful if added to school collections, but most should only be added after a quality, basic collection has been developed in the schools.

900 - 913 General History

901.9 Bronowski, Jacob
BRO The Ascent of Man. Little, c1974
448p. $15.00

"Citing the changes from nomad to village agriculture as the largest single step in man's ascent, he highlights persons, tools, theories, and technological accomplishments in man's search to understand and control nature from prehistory to the present."

Booklist

Traces the development of man from primitive hunter to technological innovator. A refreshing look at the history of mankind in general. Will appeal to more mature students but can be adapted and should prove useful to others.

Reg Bonnell

901.94 Ehrlich, Paul R., & Ehrlich, Anne H.
EHR The End of Affluence; a basic blueprint for your future. Ballantine, c1974
307p. paper $1.95

"Militant attacks on government and the business establishment are again mounted as Ehrlich calls for an end to economic and population growth and for a massive social reorganization to avoid disaster. With no possible compromise between technological expansion and environmental protection allowed, this warning allied with an inexhaustible supply of solutions is a bit one-sided but chillingly effective."

"...a handbook intended to help the individual American assess the world population-resource-environment crisis, make appropriate personal and political decisions, and adapt to a new era of limited resources."

Booklist
WHA 2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide $46.50

"Designed,' as the guide states, 'to show students what an historian does and what the nature of historical research is.' Part one follows a history professor as . . . she explains the differences between primary and secondary resources, and defines the various forms of information available to researchers: films, books, newspapers, tapes, letters. In the second part, two authors report on a women's rights parade in Washington, D.C. in 1913. Each report is 'checked' by the narrator for the reliability of its resources, leaving the viewer to decide which is more believable.

Booklist

909 The City in History (Kit) Educational Dimensions Corp., c1972
CIT 2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide
$44.00

"Offers the viewer a pictorial panorama of cities from their ancient beginning to the modern city. Proposals for the 'city of the future' are also described. Throughout this presentation cities are pictured as the centers of civilization.
Architecture, the arts, religion, and the university all thrive in an urban environment. Less attention is paid to the common problems of cities throughout the ages until we reach the modern city."

"One should give serious thought to adding this accurate and well produced set to an audio-visual collection."

Previews

909 East Meets West: a contrast in values and cultures (Kit)
EAS The Center for Humanities, c1973
D.C. 2 Kodak Carousel Cartridges (80 slides each),
2 cassettes, teacher's guide. $97.50

"Part I described China and India at the time of Marco Polo's visit; Part II summarizes the reaction of China, India and Japan to Western challenges. There is a discussion of Western influences following Vasco da Gama's explorations in 1497-1499, contrasting Eastern and Western philosophies and values."

"The program is illustrated with Eastern and Western works of art - paintings, drawings, scrolls, sculpture and photographs of architecture, people, urban and rural scenes. The quality of the visuals is excellent. The guide includes background information, scripts, reference notes, comprehension, discussion and inquiry questions... The alternating voices of the male and female narrators are clear, unaffected, and have an interesting, lively style."

Hessel, Milton
Man's Journey Through Time; the important events in each area of the earth, in each period of history. Simon & Schuster, c1974
224p. $9.95

"Human history in a nutshell from antiquity through the present, with a look at prehistory for background. Divided into five areas of historical development - the Mediterranean and Europe, Asia, Oceania, Africa and the Americas - the book treats events that took place simultaneously across the earth in each successive period. A 'Time Bar' at the beginning of each chapter locates the time of the events covered in the chapter in relation to overall history. Designed for easy access by color-coded sections throughout the text is complemented by many maps and line drawings. A useful tool for history students."

Booklist
Patterns of Civilization: lessons from the past. (Kit).
Pathescope Educational Films, c1973
5 filmstrips, 5 cassettes, teacher's guide. $75.00

"Each strip in this well planned series examines one of the great civilizations of the past using as a framework Arnold Toynbee's theory that each civilization followed a pattern of birth, growth, and maturation, and, because each failed to solve certain problems, decline and death. Using photographs, engravings, portraits, and maps, the problems of the past are evaluated and related to the situation of the United States today. The strips can be used individually or as a series. The excellent teacher's manual has a guide for each filmstrip, containing an overview and inquiry into the content. The manual also lists the same questions that are asked in each strip, with the frame-by-frame narrative, concluding with questions for further study and a discussion on 'moral dilemmas' in history."

BAK The Cold War. Putnam, c1972
128p. $5.95

"Quoting freely from many contemporary sources the author outlines succinctly events in the power struggle between the Soviet Union and the Western Allies after World War II. She describes briefly the Truman Doctrine, Marshall Plan, Berlin blockade and airlift, nuclear arms race, Warsaw Pact, Suez Crisis, Berlin Wall, Cuban crisis, and the SALT talks. Baker explains how the countries of Eastern Europe came under Russian domination and why no Western nation has aided revolting countries behind the Iron Curtain. She also includes Soviet and Red Chinese relations and the Korean War...Generously illustrated with photographs."

909.82 Eye on Our Times (Kit) CBS News & Josha Tree Productions, n.d.
EYE 6 filmstrips, 6 cassettes, teacher's guide.
$96.50

"Six contemporary controversial issues are presented by CBS newsmen. Emphasis is on careful examination of all sides, as well as the presentation of the historical background of each issue. The well done illustrations consist of color photographs, news pictures, old drawings, charts, and maps. The audio uses sound effects, music and actual voices of those involved."

"The series is at its best when it attempts to recreate actual events. The quality of the presentations vary. Those subjects - Middle East, Northern Ireland, United Nations, and the draft - which have clearly defined issues are much better presented than women's rights and American religion, which are too complex for this format...Good teaching guides are provided."

Previews
Twentieth-Century Nationalism (Kit) Educational Audio Visual, c1973
2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide
$28.00

"An interesting examination of the powerful growth of 20th Century nationalism in three former European colonies - India, Viet Nam, and Nigeria. Appropriate music and narration is used to trace briefly the meanings of 19th Century nationalism in Europe and the 20th Century forces that brought people in Africa and Asia to seek home rule."

"As a whole, these presentations are excellent for teaching modern history in secondary schools."

Previews

A good explanation of the phenomena of nationalism using three modern countries as examples. Should be very beneficial to students having trouble with this concept.

Columbus and the Discovery of America (Jackdaw) Clarke Irwin, c1965
$3.50

This Jackdaw tells the story of Columbus' extra-ordinary expeditions of discovery, and with contemporary maps and reconstructions of the ships in which he sailed, shows how courageous he was to undertake the long voyages of exploration. Exhibits include: a reconstruction of Columbus' three ships, a chart of the currents and winds in the North Atlantic, a map of the world before the discovery of America, a portrait of Christopher Columbus, plus numerous factual broadsheets.

Reg Bonnell

The Voyages of Captain Cook (Jackdaw) Clarke Irwin, c1965
$3.50

Cook's voyages in the 18th Century reflect Britain's growing concern with building an empire. This Jackdaw outlines these voyages and describes the hazards he encountered—scourvy, disgruntled crews, adverse weather and hostile natives. Exhibits include: a chart of New Zealand drawn by Cook, pages from Cook's journal, incidents on Cook's voyages drawn by the artists who accompanied him, plus factual broadsheets. Also included are a bibliography and questions for further research. Excellent as primary source material for the study of history.

Reg Bonnell

Newby, Eric
288p. $25.00

"This traces 4000 years of discovery and exploration beginning with the timid ventures of pre-Christian Mediterranean traders into neighboring coastlines and concluding with two brief (two pages each) summaries of present forays under the oceans and into space. The first chapters discuss motives behind the making of explorers; the myths and legends surrounding the earliest voyages; conquests of Egyptian, Greek, and Roman trips into the unknown; and the 'Folk Wanderings' which dispersed Indo-European peoples 1000 years before Christ's birth...Discoveries of and in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, the Americas, and Antarctica from the 5th to the 20th Century are examined in terms of the intellectual beliefs, technological developments, cultural climates and motives which led to exploration. Maps, pictures, sketches, and historical writings are used profusely to illustrate the author's comprehensive text. A bibliography, thorough index, and map of each continent keyed to its explorers complete an engrossing probe of man's discovery of his universe."

"According to Archer, the Number Two man in Red China is the man who made Maoism work. In describing his life and up-and-down relationships with Chiang-Kai-Shek and Mac-Tse-Tung, the straightforward chronological narrative brings out Chou's personal qualities of charm, compromise, and patience. Archer also shows how Chou's western education contributed to his political successes in China. What comes through as clearly as Chou's character is the ability of the Chinese people to pull together in defense against foreign invasion. Some fictional dialogue is included, but the well-written account is factual overall."

"Using photographs, newspaper articles, pamphlets, and personal letters, the author presents a biography of India's spiritual leader Mahatma Gandhi."

"This is certainly one of the most astute and objective biographies of Gandhi that have been published for young people, giving an unusually balanced picture of his strengths and weaknesses. In an excellent preface, the author discusses Gandhi's inconsistencies, his mistakes in judgment, his proclivity for giving advice on subjects on which he was uninformed. The book substantiates and illustrates these failings, but it is equally forthright about Gandhi's dedication, his integrity, his charismatic personality and it gives a coherent picture of Gandhi's role in India's struggle for independence, and of his place in the movement for peaceful resistance."

"...this is a lively, objective account of one of the world's greatest military leaders. Against the background of a struggle between Rome and Carthage for control of the Mediterranean basin, Hannibal's life is traced from his childhood in army camps to his self-inflicted death by poisoning at age 66. His forces always outnumbered, Hannibal's victories were won more by brainpower than by manpower. Descriptions of his crossing the Alps and the battles fought during the Second Punic War are interspersed with accounts of the political decisions made on both sides which influenced the outcome on the battlefield. 245p. paper $9.95

"As it was meant to be, this book is a brief biography of Canada's fourteenth Prime Minister. Mike Pearson had a remarkable career as a soldier, university professor, diplomat and politician. It is difficult, however, to assess the career of a public figure who died just over two years ago.
The author admits that he had to rely almost exclusively on secondary sources of information, with the exception of Pearson's public memoirs.

The result is a straightforward account of Pearson's life and career and provides a summary of the turbulent period in Canadian politics from 1957-1968, the Diefenbaker-Pearson years. For the student who must delve further, Thordarson has included a valuable list of 'Sources and Further Reading'."

"In this sympathetic and fair portrait of Trotsky, Archer clarifies without oversimplifying the muddled political situation of the Russian Revolution in 1917. He describes Trotsky's growth and development as an important Communist leader within the context of 19th - and 20th - Century Russian history. An idealistic and sometime fanatical believer in world revolution, Trotsky is seen as a charismatic speaker and a Communist theoretician. Archer believes his contributions to the Revolution are often overlooked because his political ambitions were not as great as either Lenin's or Stalin's. This well-written biography of Trotsky... captures the excitement and tragedy of the era when Czarist rule was overthrown by the Marxist revolution."

This series lacks depth in treatment of cultural history but provides a broad overview of trends, causes, and effects which is useful for introducing or reviewing the period. Photography and narration (both content and pace) are excellent. However, because picture subject matter is limited to ruins and objects d'art (with some maps), concepts being emphasized in the narration would not always be clear to the student who does not have prior knowledge of the subject. "Beginning with the Minoan and Mycenaean worlds which were forerunners of the city states of Classical Greece, this broad survey traces the development of Greek civilization from the Bronze Age to the death of Alexander III. The evolution of social and political thought in Athens is discussed along with the role Athens played during the Persian Wars. Accurate coverage of the art, architecture, athletics, drama, philosophy, and science of the Golden Age shows Greece's monumental legacy to the Western World. Van Duyne's occasional sweeping generalizations might mislead readers; however, the coverage is generally interesting and includes a chronological chart, suggested reading list and numerous outstanding illustrations."

"Ranging over the whole Classical period (480 - 330 B.C.) the book tells how the Athenians worked and lived, how they brought up their families and how they looked after their homes, how they worshipped their gods and their heroes. This is Athens, from the Persian wars to the conquests of Alexander the Great, a society remembered above all for art and poetry."

WES 4 filmstrips, 4 cassettes, teacher's guide, $90.00

D.C. "A dramatic approach is utilized to bring history into modern focus. Sound effects, music and narration make the past seem contemporary. Covering the period from 1760 through 1919 in four unified filmstrips allows students to build a realistic understanding of the Great War. This period is not seen in an isolated sense as rich examples from the distant and not-so-distant past illustrates man's progress toward the industrial revolution. The information is presented factually in both visual and audio modes. Photographs of actual happenings, political cartoons, and paintings add greatly to the understanding of the narration. The visuals and narration give the viewer enough information with which to form judgments of the period."

ASI The Dark Ages. Houghton, c1968 256p. $6.95

S.C. "With the close of the second century, the Roman Empire became a thing of the past. The Germanic tribes of Northern Europe made their mark on the crumbling empire and what is now called the 'Dark Ages' began. (The author) explores this obscure period of history.

"The author provides lineage charts of the Merovingian Kings, The House of Pepin, and the Carolingian Dynasty together with a table of dates. Asimov writes with clarity, many explanations, and a wit that is often evident. His record discounts legends but shows how some of the sagas used historical names and scenes."

The Black Death, 1347-1351; plague spread through Europe killing a large percentage of the population. Watts, c1974 79p. $3.95

"This unsensationalized picture of Europe during the plague years gives insight into social, religious, and economic conditions of the day, particularly as they were affected by the Black Death. Black-and-White reproductions of art of the Medieval and Renaissance periods fill out an accurate description of the realities and superstitions surrounding this brief but momentous time in history. A good addition to the scant juvenile literature on the subject. Suitable for slow or reluctant readers."

CON
Encyclopedia Britannica Educational Corp., c1974
7 filmstrips, 7 cassettes, teacher's guide $97.95

"Entirely illustrated with original watercolors that convey a sense of dramatic movement and express the character and emotions of historic figures like Danton, Marat, Robespierre, Napoleon, Metternich, Garibaldi, and Bismark, this set sweeps across a century of European history covering such events as:
the French Revolution, Napoleon and his empire, the Metternich era, the unification of Italy, and the rise of Germany. Because the filmstrips are limited in time, each one sticks to the main ideas, movements and events that occurred during a particular section of years; relates those ideas, movements, and events to the economic, social and political developments that were occurring in other parts of Europe; and examines the historical significance of key figures who appeared during each period.
Though, naturally, a good deal of information has been left out, what is included is more than enough for a basic understanding of what happened between 1789 and 1890."

The Crusades; saints and sinners (Kit). Learning Corporation of America, c1975
2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide $44.00

"The major thrust of the set is not to provide factual data, but to represent an age of questioning and conflict from many viewpoints. The viewer learns of the various reasons for participating in the crusade, while seeing the absolute destruction of Jerusalem and the death of many of that city's citizens. The question remains today whether the crusades can be attributed to man's noblest idealism or to his basest instincts. This and other points of discussion make this production a worthwhile addition..."

Hamilton, Franklin.
The Crusades. Dial, c1965
320p. $5.15

"Supported by quotations from contemporary chronicles, narrative reveals the complexities of the wars that established and sought to maintain the Frankish state of Outremer in the Middle East. That war for holy ideals quickly became war for material gain and political power is evident. From 1099 on, the successful crusaders in the newly won kingdoms grasped for further victories."

S.C.

"The author has turned his considerable talent for simplifying and dramatizing history to those 200 years of ferocious, unchristian wars for which the name 'crusade' now seems savagely ironic. Not a romance of saints with swords, this is the true and much more interesting history of rough but fascinating men."

2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide, $28.00

"Concentrating on the High Middle Ages in Europe (13th - 15th centuries) this set combines literature, music, architecture, and manuscript illumination with an outline survey of social history."

"The narration, underscored by medieval music, proceeds swiftly, clearly, and reasonably accurately, but somewhat humorlessly and overly sympathetic to the peasantry. Occasionally the visuals relate only tenuously to the text, and the frames are rather too heavily cropped. However, the selection is intelligent; and the photography consistently excellent."

"Covers roughly, the period between 300 and 1500, with discussions of the church, Charlemagne, the Norsemen, Monasteries, Chivalry, the crusader, medieval towns, trade and travel, education, and government."

"The author's informal, intimate style of history writing which she maintains without ever seeming to 'write down' to the pupil, the frequent use of quotations from contemporary chronicles, the amount of space given over to a discussion of the civilization of the period, and the fine illustrations... make a real contribution to the history collections."

"Like a slice of time past, the Napoleonic era is re-created in all its grandeur and trauma. Beginning with the French Revolution, which set the scene for Napoleon's bold entry onto the stage, the Durants present a sweeping survey of the arts, sciences, and individuals who made history in France and its neighboring countries. Against this background the Corsican's star rises and sets. GAL 2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, $44.00

"This set concerns Galileo Galilei, astronomer, physicist, and mathematician, who lived in Italy between 1564 and 1642 and was censured by the Inquisition in 1632. The strips show the man conducting the experiments in his workshop to provide concrete arguments at a debate with conservative clergy and through the narrator, relate how the Church, whose beliefs about the universe were philosophically based on the teachings of Aristotle, found the experimentally documented writings of Galileo repugnant... Raising questions about the strength of the viewers' own beliefs, as well as about the Church, Renaissance, and Galileo, this set will intrigue students in senior high school social studies."

2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher’s guide $49.00

"Utilizes superbly the techniques of motion picture films to present a dramatized interpretation of an historical event. Throughout the action a non-obtrusive narrator sets the scene and provides the viewer with relevant facts. In addition to gaining an acquaintance with those facts, the viewer is stimulated to reconsider the forces which brought Napoleon to power and ponder those which led to his fall... The filmstrips preserve the feeling of movement that is usually lacking in most filmstrips and give the viewer an uncommon sense of intimacy with history and her personages."

940.2 The Protestant Reformation (Kit) Educational Audio Visual, c1974
2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher’s guide $35.25

"Paintings, drawings, woodcuts, prints, and illuminated manuscripts illustrate this set by giving contemporary interpretations of life in northern Europe at the beginning of the sixteenth century, locked into feudalism reinforced by the Catholic Church, and analyzing the growing dissension toward control of the church that emerged in the beliefs of the Protestant reformers, Luther, Zwingli and Calvin, that later spread through northern Europe and England, and that eventually triumphed in the rise of capitalism and the middle class in the seventeenth Hungary, and Russia and the influence of nationalism and socialism. He describes graphically the lives of people during the period commenting on housing, food, fashion, female occupations, sport, and the press; devotes a chapter each to science, religion, and art; and concludes with a report on the art of war and the buildup for World War I. Liberally illustrated with maps, photographs, and color plates."

940.2 The Romantic Protest: The Dynamics of Change (Kit) Multi-ROM Media Productions, c1971
1 filmstrip, 1 cassette, teacher's guide $11.95

"A good overview of the Romantic Age from the end of the 18th to the middle of the 19th Century. It covers a lot of ground - from writers and philosophers to musicians and artists. The narrator states that the Romantics 'wanted to cast aside, the neat Newtonian world based on natural laws'. By mid-19th Century they had done just that and developed an almost 'anarchistic, anti-intellectual world of nature, impulse and mystery'. They had also determined that society would not become a 'branch of physics, nor a mere cog in an impersonal machine', which sounds very familiar today."

"The pictures are reproductions of works of art representative of the age and portraits of influential men of the time. The presentation does not mention any of the women of the period. The narrator sounds impersonal and calm, but does his job well."

"Teachers in high school... will find this a good way to briefly introduce or summarize the Romantic Age."

Rudonff, Raymond
Knights and the Age of Chivalry. Viking, c1974
240p. $16.95

"In a brisk, informed survey of European knighthood from Norman times to the Hundred Years War, Rudonff focuses on the knights themselves as men of action in a world where warfare was the supreme activity and they were the most powerful force. Often quoting contemporary chronicles, he traces the changing pattern of the knightly life-style, culture, and code as well as the evolution of armor and weapons, the development of tournaments, the course of the Crusades, and the rise and fall of the great orders of knights. He concludes with a look at the knights in decline, showing how on losing their monopoly in warfare, they turned to a fantasy life of tournaments and pageantry. Also covered are the activities of Mussolini, Franco, and Stalin, and Eimerl is chiefly concerned with why it was possible for these dictators of the left and right to gain and hold power. The grinding economic and social conditions in the 30's are well illustrated, as are the uses of terror and propaganda. Complex historical events such as the Reichstag fire are handled in a clear balanced manner. Reeder's two volume history is detailed and well written for high school students. Recommended.

Reg Bonnell

940.53 Reeder, Red

301p. $5.95

"Following a short recapitulation of the course of the war through the first half of 1942, Reeder traces the action in Europe and Africa through V-E Day, then covers the war with the Japanese. A number of photographs and maps illustrate the readable, lucid text."

940.53  Savage, Katharine
SAV  The Story of the Second World War. Walck, c1958
      271p.  $5.50

"The author has compressed the (causes and) military action of every theater of war. The evacuation of Dunkirk is detailed skillfully, memorably. Weakness in the chronicle lies in sustained hyperbole....shortcomings are minor compared with the books achievements in full coverage of fact, brevity, attractiveness and uniqueness."

Jr. High Catalog

940.53  Taylor, Alan J. P.
TAY  The Second World War: An Illustrated History. Putnam, c1975
      234p.  $17.50

"Taylor introduces his subject comparing the two world wars, pointing out their differences, and contrasting the four political leaders of the second war. Beginning with events in 1936 he emphasizes the lack of understanding which led to Allied defeats as the war progressed. He candidly criticizes all countries in the execution of the war and is equally critical of individual decisions, but concludes that the conflict was a war justified in its aims and successful in accomplishing them. Illustrated with many photographs and excellent battle maps."

940.53  World War II (Kit) American Heritage, c1972
WOR  5 filmstrips, 5 cassettes, teacher's guide  $90.00

"Touches briefly on the diverse battlefronts and highlights the devastation of World War II. This series is a slick, well-documented panorama of military leaders, their campaigns, and tragic civilian involvement. The sound track is an especially effective and affecting combination of authentic voice recordings and significant musical selections."
Taken individually or as a continuous presentation, this series can serve as a spring board for class review or discussion. The teacher's manual contains a graded bibliography, which includes both fiction and non-fiction.

Bingham, Caroline

The Kings & Queens of Scotland. Taplinger, c1976
182p. $9.95

"Of the men and women who wore the crown of Scotland, including the Stuarts who ruled over both kingdoms after the death of England's Elizabeth I, many were bonny, some sickly and others ruthless, but Bingham overlooks none as she introduces the dramatic personae of Scotland's monarchal history. Outstanding features of each sovereign's reign are pointed out, and a taste of their individual characters is offered. Appended: Samples of poetry written by various monarchs, chronology of principal events in Scotland's history, genealogical charts, and suggestions for further reading."

The Irish Question, 1800-1922 (Kit) Multi-Media Productions, c1972
2 filmstrips, 1 cassette, teacher's guide

"This production concerns one of the glaring problems facing the British Isles today. It shows contemporary strife over religious and civil rights in a relatively small country... For the most part, it is quite accurate and shows a good selection of authentic photographs and drawings. There are two errors to be noted - the leader of the Home Rule Party in Ireland during the late 1800's was Charles Stuart Parnell; Ulster is one of the four provinces of Ireland, not a country."

"The production is well organized and follows the stream of Irish history in a fairly objective manner. These filmstrips will be very useful in the classroom.

Well done.

190p. $5.50

"The author discusses the historical background and events of the five-year uprising which began during Easter Week of 1916 and led to Irish independence after nearly 800 years of British rule."

The first part of the book has its bloodshed and its sadness but is marked by the honor and bravery of the outgunned and outmanned Irish who finally managed to bring a measure of freedom to their land. The last part of the story is sheer bloody tragedy...The writing is clear, sympathetic and intelligent."

GRA The Easter Rising, Dublin, 1916: the Irish rebel against British rule. Watts, c1972
90p. $3.95

"Concerning one incident in the Irish struggle, this examination of the 1916 rebellion against the British imposed military and economic struggle relates why and how it occurred, what it meant to the participants, and its influence on later events. At times, the coverage is sketchy, and the portrayals of Connolly, Pearse, and others are not particularly well done. Nevertheless, the realistic, factual treatment should capitalize on the interest in Ireland's violent current affairs."

941.59 MacStiofain, Sean
MAC Revolutionary in Ireland. Atheneum, c1975
372p. $11.95

"What goes into the makeup of a revolutionary is demonstrated in the memoirs of the ex-chief of staff of the Provisional Irish Republican Army. Born in 'England' of an Irishwoman, MacStiofain cultivated at an early age a consciousness of his Irish heritage, developing an increasing fondness for everything Irish and a disdain for those who cared little for what he felt were the best interests of Ireland. Such sentiments led him to an arduous involvement with the IRA, the events of which MacStiofain articulately reviews. Naturally partial but never shrill, his comments shed light on the interworkings and raison d'etre of this topical movement."

- 123 -

"After a brief summary of Irish history since 1171, Stevens gives a very clear picture of Ireland's twentieth-century struggle for independence from Britain, civil war, and establishment of a stable republic. She mentions the partition from Northern Ireland and devotes the last three chapters to the conflict in Northern Ireland which began in 1965. Bibliographic notes appended."

941.6 Bloody Sunday, 1972: whose point of view? (Kit) Educational

BLO Audio Visual, c1973

1 filmstrip, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide $21.50

"The important point which this set is intended to achieve and does, is found in the sub-title, 'Whose Point of View?' After viewing this presentation a student will be more aware of the problems of attaining objective truth. The information about Northern Ireland is recent, the historical synopsis valid, and the use of conflicting eye witnesses effective. The quality of the sound is good; the visuals are accurate documentary shots which are carefully related to the script. The notes suggest topics for further investigation."

D.C.

"The second portion of the set, audio only, encourages good note taking and through a simulation of the rapid delivery of popular media, forces accurate recall. A student will recognize that it is not easy to achieve a sophisticated evaluation of 'an incident where people hold strongly partisan views'. This production provides an excellent introduction to fundamental historiography. Highly recommended."
A very comprehensive, unbiased treatment of the topic.
Extremely long - some pictures seem unnecessary. Excellent for Grade XI Academic history. Could be too long and involved for other students.

A Lion in the Sun: a background book on the rise and fall of the British Empire. Parents' Magazine Press,
c1973
280p. $4.95

"At the end of World War I, the British Empire encircled the globe, encompassing over a quarter of the world's land surface and population. Dolan presents a logical and absorbing account of the Empire's rise and fall. Covering 400 years of history the book is divided into three parts: The first concentrates on British exploration and colonial development during the 16th and 17th centuries; Part Two shows how the Empire achieved unparalleled power by the close of World War
I; and the final section explains why the Empire declined and became the Commonwealth of Nations. Lucidly written, this analyzes why certain historical situations took place and includes colorful sketches of the dynamic men who shaped the Empire's growth. Concise and thorough, this survey brings the panorama of the British Empire into focus in a compelling narrative."

MAP The Golden Dragon; Alfred the Great and his times.
Open Court, c1974
296p. $8.95

"In this almost reverential biography of the ninth-century king who ruled England at 22, Mapp stresses Alfred's remarkable intellect and inventiveness. Like the Renaissance man still to come, Alfred's learning and interests were wide ranging, including literature, military defense, and systems of law and education. Mapp places him ahead of Charlemagne as the first effective unifier of the English nation. A colorful, popular biography. Notes, select bibliography, and Alfred's will and 77 rules of law appended."

"This game is based on the attempted invasion of England by the Spanish Armada in 1588. Students reenact military roles, and although the outcome may differ from the actual historical result, depending upon strategies employed, conditions determining strategy are historically accurate. An excellent discussion motivator, it is simple to play, and is most successfully used when background readings are included. Some students (particularly younger ones) have difficulty with the reading necessary to play the game."

"Beginning with Henry VIII, who established the House of Tudor, this is a factual overview of Henry VIII's personal life, reign, and the state of England during this period.
Southworth covers the King's divorce from Catherine of Aragon, which precipitated England's separation from the Roman Catholic Church. Each of Henry's succeeding wives is accorded her place in history. The wars and political maneuvers involving other European nations and the domestic religious upheaval are discussed, and Sir Thomas Moore, Archbishop Cran-mar, Thomas Cromwell and the other policy makers who influenced the King are presented. The account concludes with the death of Henry, and a mention of the descendents until George I.
This accurate title will serve the needs of younger people who are interested in this period of history."

JAR Pitt the Younger. Scribner, c1974 224p. $10.00

"The precocious skill for statecraft which served William Pitt the Younger so well as one of Britain's youngest prime ministers, is clearly brought out in Jarrett's biographical treatement. As Pitt tried to stem the revolutionary sentiment which spread throughout late eighteenth-century Europe, however, he found himself overmatched at home and abroad, and Jarrett is adept at pointing out the rigidity of Pitt's aristocratic concept of the relations between the state and the governed. The Desperate Act: the assassination of Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo. McGraw, c1968

"A documented story of the event which took place on June 28, 1914. Two shots were fired that triggered a chain of events which culminated in World War I. The archduke was killed by a Bosnian student, Princip, who with five other young men, organized a plot to assassinate a tyrant because they desperately wanted to be free."

"Day-by-day report of events surrounding the 1956 Hungarian revolution combines recollections by British journalist Barber of the 'London Daily Mail' with data from extensive interviews in a staunchly anti-communist résumé. The momentum of the uprising ably recapitulated in the account is contrasted to details of the political infighting among top Hungarian leaders that preceded entry by Russian troops. Documents from students, Hungarian leaders, and Soviet sources pertinent to the events and a bibliography are appended. Maps of Budapest and of Hungary are included."

"From 987 when the Capetian dynasty was founded to 1458 when the 100 Years' War ended in victory, the borders of France expanded and shrank along with the skills and fortunes of rulers who promised, perjured, battled, massacred, and married for land. With humorous anecdotes and gossipy innuendoes, Asimov illuminates the labyrinth of aristocrats, who helped create France and provides intriguing insights into their activities, strategies, and errors. He concentrates on the political scene, royal relationships, and battles, but also points out agricultural, religious, scientific, and cultural activities and indicates those which introduced the Renaissance."

"Covers the historical basis for the problems of Italian unity from the earliest Roman Empire to the later conflicts between Italian city states near the time of the Renaissance. The emphasis, however, is on recent events and their effect on European History after 1848... Historical facts are accurate and simply presented. The part that other nations have played in Italian history is covered well as France, Spain, and Austria are shown vying for control of Italy in the late 19th Century. Italian leaders Mazzini, Garibaldi, and Cavour are presented, each having a different role in the final unification of Italy into a modern country. Concepts such as centralization, the need to destroy an old order to bring on the new, and the influences of the past can broaden the use of the set. Graphics and sound are excellent."

Spain's Civil War, the last great cause. Dutton, c1975
Davis, Daniel S.

"After briefly summarizing events surrounding the 1931 establishment of the republic in Spain, the mistakes the new government made, and the formation of rebel groups which opposed it, Davis tells how the civil war began, traces Franco's rise to power, and describes the enthusiastic aid given the Nationalists by Hitler and Mussolini at the same time that Britain and France refused to help the Loyalists. He reviews the earlier terrorism practiced by both sides but emphasizes the ruthless killing and brutality which later characterized the Nationalist attacks against defenseless people. Frequently using excerpts from journalists who covered the war and quoting political and military leaders, the author dramatizes the conflict as a uniquely Spanish affair at the outset which became the tragic prelude to World War II. List of books for further reading appended."

Moreover, by referring to the extent to which other countries did or did not become involved, the Spanish conflict is correctly characterized as a 'prelude to World War II'. Visual evidence such as maps, paintings, and numerous original photographs are effectively employed. A well-paced narration is balanced by a variety of frame sizes."

Despite the constant opposition of rulers of the land and the ultimate expulsion and dispersion of the Jews from Israel, the Kleins contend that the fate of Israel has always been inextricably bound with the Jews. The authors place often dramatized and inflated stories (notably those of the Bible) into as accurate an historical perspective as possible, admitting that parts of the Bible are contradictory. While the book covers a long chronological period, its main emphasis is on the Jewish influence in the land, although the experience of Jews in other lands during the Diaspora is mentioned. "In using the map treating Africa in the 1970's, which indicates the independent and non-independent countries of Africa, teachers will probably find it necessary to clarify the point that the word independent refers to the political and governmental status of the countries and not necessarily to the state or condition of black Africans living in the country."

GOL The Mystery of the Vikings in America. Lippincott, c1973
150p. $5.75

"Beginning with considerable background information on Viking life and culture and their exploration and settlement of Iceland and Greenland, this makes a case for the Viking discovery of America in the 11th Century. Theories and sources of information about the Vikings are discussed, and the author carefully points out the problems with various theories and contradictions in the Norse sagas on which he bases much of his case. There is some emphasis on important individuals in Viking development, including several women. The book is well written with attractive, informative illustrations but lacks a present-day map on which readers could locate modern place names often used in the discussion. There is no bibliography."

Reg Bonnell
Canada's Visual History (Slides) National Film Board of Canada, c1975
11 - 30 slides $149.00 or 15.00 a set

"Canada's visual history is a collection of eleven sheets of slides...Each topic comes with a bilingual guidebook. The guidebook provides good background material for the classroom teacher, a caption for each slide, and suggested readings and follow-up activities.

The slides reproduce vividly authentic photographs and paintings of the period. With good questioning and discussion, the classroom teacher could use these slides to enhance the student's oral expression, observation skills, and historical information.

Although the number of pictures involved in each topic is limited, in many cases the material is unavailable in any other form. The sturdy binder the sheets are enclosed in assures their protection."

Canadian Materials

These high quality slides will provide unique material on Canadian history. The topical approach makes this a very versatile package. Highly recommended.

Careless, James M.S. and R. Graig Brown, eds.
$9.95

"In Part I, the various decades of Canada's history are reviewed by different historians, including Donald Creighton, John Saywell and Laurier La Pierre. In Part 2, various writers cover the contemporary scene - industry, education, sports, government, arts, etc."

Basic Book List for Canadian Schools

A fairly comprehensive look at Canada and Canadians during their first 100 years. Chapter outlines should aid students when looking for source materials. Recommended.

2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes $18.25

"This is an informative, thoroughly satisfying documentary. The visuals and narrative offer a concise but authentic picture of Canada's role in the war and only an absence of contemporary popular music and an inadequate study of home front Canada can be faulted in this otherwise outstanding package."

Canadian Materials

Excellent overview of Canadian involvement in World War II, will definitely develop a feel for the time among students.

History of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (Kit) See Hear Now!

117 frames, cassette $22.00

"The history of the force from its inception to the present is clearly and entertainingly presented. Sections of the filmstrip could be studied separately such as 'The Riel Rebellion', 'The development of the West', and 'The goldrush'. The original photographs and sketches are a treat to watch, the narration crisp and anecdotal making the unit an excellent substitute for a film."

Canadian Materials

Not only a history of the RCMP but also a "mini-history" of the development of the North West. A captivating presentation.

Humphries, Charles

Canada and the Great War (Jackdaw) Clarke Irwin, c1972

$4.50

"...composed of a wide range of exhibits which collectively present World War I as Canadians reacted to it. Of interest is the copy of a letter written by a Canadian soldier at the front telling how he had "personally only killed one German - he was a shadow." It is too bad the letter itself is very difficult to read. Of use to the student, is a map of the Western Front with a time chart (1914-1919) of the principal actions, although I fail to see why mention was made of nationalist riots in Cairo in 1919 and other extraneous incidents in 1919 as well. Other exhibits include: A manuscript of "In Flanders Field," pages 1 and 2 of the Daily Colonist (Victoria, B.C.) of May 20th, 1915 with reports of the sinking of the Lusitania, a victory loan poster and an example of Bourassa's "LeDevoir" (Montreal) which presents the French Canadian reaction to conscription. This is definitely a worthwhile acquisition as supportive material on World War I."

"Maple Sugar, songs of early Canada is a program of folk songs and folk tunes. Its thirty selections spotlight four aspects of the Canadian story: people, politics, the land, and "down east". They span the land from the Klondike to Twillingate and its history through three centuries."

"The album abounds in exuberance, humor, and tenderness, and its presentation is authentic, natural and unpretentious. Clear program notes and reference to related materials increase its value to heritage-hungry Canadians."

By producing a mosaic from the stories of people and stories of the land, the editors of In Search of Canada have come as close to evoking; if not defining that spirit. The book has visual appeal to complement the text which has interest for all levels."

"...the author has presented a wide range of contemporary and controversial issues affecting Canadian-American relations. Although many points of view are presented, the author has carefully refrained from endorsing any particular viewpoint and this is a positive aspect of the work. Numerous articles from newspapers, periodicals, and reports have been reprinted on such thorny issues as foreign ownership, Canadian identity, multi-national corporations and Canadian culture. Thoughtful discussion questions on these and other topics should help the reader develop his/her own conclusions in regard to the issues. 193p. $5.95

"Beginning with an overview of daily life on the Pincher Creek Colony in Alberta, David Flint continues a well researched and documented study of the Hutterites. His research is from personal experience and reading of other first and secondary sources. Following the description of modern communal life, Mr. Flint gives the history of the Hutterites beginning in 1528, their development and changes over the years; and the persecution of the sect, both historical and modern day. One full chapter is devoted to the ethnic conflicts, their causes and results, that developed in Canada between 1914 and 1920."

KID The Winnipeg General Strike, 1917; (Jackdaw) Clarke Irwin, c1972
$4.50

"This Jackdaw is more readable and more exciting than most. Readable because the print is very clear and the material is well organized. Exciting because the contents such as the Russian propaganda posters, the One Big Union Membership Card, the strike placard, and the vivid newspaper reproductions give the reader a 'you were there' feeling. A four page excerpt of a Commons debate in 1926 contains Arthur Meighen's summary of the government's position during the 1919 strike.

The samples of four newspapers present the minute by minute events that surround the strike. Three of these newspapers promoted the red scare and blamed the discontent on "Bolsheviks." Only the "Western Labour News" tells of the poor wages, high cost of living and massive unemployment.

The exhibits in the Jackdaw, the list of questions to think about and books for further reading will definitely encourage the reader to seek additional information.

The Emerging Giant: The U.S. in 1900 (Kit) Multi-Media Productions
2 strips, with 1 cassette, or 1 disc with teacher's guide
$16.95

"America was an optimistic country during this period, alive with industry, urbanization, labor and new changes.
The changes burst into the cities and into the rural areas, often with a violence which has left a wake of controversy about labor unions, 'big business, and imperialism that is even felt today."

D.C.
"Pertinent cartoons, photographs of notable business leaders, pen, and ink drawings give an 'olden days' mood to a quickly sketched commentary. The discussion guide analyzes the early 1900's and today as two eras with a good deal of similarity. Historical information about important political people is excluded, perhaps necessarily so... For the period after the Civil War and before World War I, this introduction adquately outlines the domestic problems."

emade the crash of 1929. Mason & Lipscomb, c1974
150p. $6.95

"Although somewhat repetitious, Axon's history of the stock-market crash in 1929 offers a clear picture of the business boom following World War I; manipulation and speculation in the stock market, and the result of the crash. The author contrasts Hoover's and Roosevelt's methods of dealing with the Great Depression and names the various acts passed by Congress from 1933 to 1945 which were designed to prevent future catastrophes. The last chapters consider the question of whether such a disaster could happen again and what the U.S. would be like today, had there been no crash. Axon offers no panacea for dealing with inflation or an economic downturn in the future. Roosevelt's first inaugural address, a glossary, and a few suggestions for further reading appended."

The Grapes of Wrath and the 1930's (Kit) Educational Audio Visual, c1972
2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide $28.00

"This set...avoids the tedium associated with presentations treating economics. While it presents the events and conditions of the depression, it concentrates on rural America and the problems of the tenant farmer.

'The Problem' explains who the migrants were, where they came from, and why. It shows the droughts, duststorms, and foreclosures that forced these people onto the road. Attempts at solutions explode the myth that the New Deal magically ended the depression. It explains Roosevelt's major attempts to bring relief and their small effect on migrants.

These filmstrips not only tell of the times but also convey the feeling of and for those times. These effects are achieved through (sic) quotations from John Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath, folk music from 30's, and documentary photos from the 30's."

1 filmstrip, 1 cassette, teacher's guide $19.50

'When Vietnam is the turning point in America's relations with the rest of the world, this filmstrip examines the shift from the United States' strong economic and military international commitments to a growing trend toward isolationism and national self-interest.

D.C. All factors of this current complex political issue are considered in this comprehensive treatment. Effective use is made of direct sources, such as taped statements by senators, labor leaders, and businessmen. Although these provide variety and authority, they are not of the same clarity as the excellent narration. The dramatic and realistic photography includes scenes of current political leaders.'
A commendable, objective presentation which does not attempt to provide answers, it is designed to stimulate and initiate discussion by students.

The U-2 Incident, May, 1950: an American spy plane downed over Russia intensifies the Cold War. Watts, c1973 64p. $3.95

"Describing the late spring of 1960 as a "time of hope" for easing Cold War tensions, Cook then recounts the U-2 incident involving the capture of U.S. pilot Francis Gary Powers. The author summarizes the development of CIA and its activities, focusing finally on the U-2 reconnaissance missions over Russian territory. Powers' involvement is recapped, and his flight on May 1, 1960 is described in detail. The book concludes by raising remaining mysteries and stating that "The chief lesson to be learned from the entire U-2 episode could well be that a secret intelligence agency should not be permitted to become a virtual law unto itself..." President Eisenhower is seen as an unwitting dupe of lower echelons in government, and Cook implies that the U-2 incident alone wrecked what otherwise would have been a rosy relationship between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. Cook's critical reporting takes on obvious anti-CIA, anti-military stance..."

A brief historical discussion is included, but the emphasis is on the present and future. The many sides of unionism are objectively discussed from racketeers and social reformers to public attitudes and management's cooperation or antagonism.
Schwartz clearly treats the phases of union organization, e.g.
the local state federations, internationals, etc.; the goals of unions, e.g., better wages and social benefits; and the unions' influence on federal and state legislation regarding social reform and business practices."
Collective bargaining and labor contracts as they affect labor membership as a determinant of the future position of unions...

Why Do We Obey Laws? (Kit) Sunburst Communications, c1974
2 filmstrips, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide
$45.00

"... this set discusses such major reasons why people obey laws as fear of punishment, group pressure, and learned conscience, and cites such reasons why people do not live in accordance with the law as greed, poverty, and contempt for rules that seem unjust.
One of the most interesting elements is a description of the way in which Martin Luther King Jr. defined just and unjust laws as they applied to the black civil rights movement in the 1960's, in which blacks were bound together under the 'justifiable' motivation that their actions were the result of 'unjust' laws designed to rob them of their dignity. In direct contrast, an explanation of Socrates' feeling that, if a person decides to live under a certain political system, that person is obligated to obey the laws of that system or live somewhere else... The set merely provides contrasting ideals believed over the centuries in order to motivate discussion of how things were in the past, how they are now, and how they ought to be in the future.

1 filmstrip, 2 cassettes, teacher's guide

"While photographs show the interior of a typical prison, male and female ex-convicts comment in voice-over about their experiences as incarcerated criminals. Though the visuals are good, the commentary carries the crucial information, as does an additional cassette which includes four 15-minute interviews with leaders in the field of correction. Containing a well-developed guide suggesting various ways the set can be used."

Baer, Walter E.

The Labor Arbitration Guide. Dow Jones - Irwin, c1974
191p. $10.95

"Procedures of grievance arbitration; the selection of an arbitrator; and steps in resolution of crises are clarified in a trenchant handbook on industrial relations. Representative arbitration clauses, elements of grievance methods, mechanics of mediation versus arbitration, and critical concluding issues illustrate the ramifications of arbitration as a technique for solution of labor-management problems. Citations and bibliographical references appended."

"Students needing information on what arbitration is and how it works will find their questions answered clearly and fully in this layman's guide."

Books

Junior High School Library Catalog. Second edition. New York: H.W. Wilson Co., 1970 + annual supplements. A comprehensive listing of recommended books for purchase in junior high schools or schools which contain these grades. Books are listed according to Dewey Decimal Number and critical reviews of each book are presented. Annual supplements update this listing. Every subject is covered.

Periodicals

Booklist. 23 issues $20. American Library Association. 50 Huron St. Chicago, Ill. 60611
This magazine provides a current guide to materials worthy of consideration for purchase by school and public libraries. It evaluates both print and non-print material. Any item reviewed in this publication is recommended. Also reviews general reference works.

An annotated awareness list of Canadian material, print and non-print. Not all materials included are recommended.

In Review. 4 issues $10 for 1 year. Ontario Provincial Library Service. 14th Floor Howat Block, Queen's Park, Toronto
A periodical which reviews Canadian books for young readers. Not all books reviewed are recommended. Particularly useful in keeping you informed about new Canadian books.
"The number one on-going media source for teachers." Articles on new developments. Reviews are included.

Previews. 9 issues $9.50. R. R. Bowker Co. 1180 Avenue of the Americas, New York 10036.
Critically reviews non-print software and hardware. This magazine divides the reviews by medium e.g. 16mm films, filmstrips, etc. and then subdivides each of these into subject areas. Annotations inform you as to the content of each item. Prices are included. An excellent source of non-print reviews.

A periodical which is especially useful to school librarians but of interest to any teachers who are concerned about books that children are reading. Contains excellent annotated reviews.
